

Summary

A sixty-five-year-old lady from Rajagiriya, who was diagnosed with diabetes mellitus, hypertension, hyperlipidaemia and chronic kidney disease presented with progressive memory impairment for two years duration.

She was diagnosed with Alzheimer's dementia and hypothyroidism and was treated and followed up at the dementia clinic at the National hospital of Sri Lanka.

Her psychological and behavioural symptoms improved mildly following pharmacological therapy.