

Abstract:

Disseminated tuberculosis with lymphadenopathy and lymphoma are interconnected conditions which has different treatment modalities and prognosis. Both conditions present in similar manner and it is important to differentiate between them. Here we present a case of clinically diagnosed disseminated tuberculosis in a 28-year-old patient, initially mimicking lymphoma.