

Abstract

This case report describes an association of deep venous thrombosis with COVID 19 infection in a young individual without any other predisposing factors for coagulopathy. It is important be vigilance on Covid 19 infected patients regarding development of coagulopathy. The hypercoagulable state associated with COVID-19 likely contributed to the thrombotic event.