

ABSTRACT

A 72year old male presented with generalized body weakness, ill-health and productive cough for three months. Physical examination and laboratory investigations confirmed the diagnosis of Addison's disease due to Histoplasma capsulatum infection of the adrenal glands. He was treated with intravenous hydrocortisone, followed by oral hydrocortisone and itraconazole.