

Abstract

Headache is a common symptom often complained about by adolescents. But when it is associated with visual disturbances including diplopia and changes in the fundi it is more sinister. Here we report a case of a young boy who has presented with a history of worsening headache and diplopia with the left lateral gaze.