

Introduction

Kikuchi-Fujimoto disease or Kikuchi disease is a disease of unknown aetiology with a benign self-limiting course presenting with tender lymphadenopathy with or without systemic manifestations including low grade fever. Recurrence of disease is rare, and it rarely causes fatalities [1]. We report a case of Kikuchi disease presenting as pyrexia of unknown origin.